SGA’S DONATION DRIVE

BY REBECCA MUNDAY
Staff Writer

The Student Government Association (SGA) is hosting a donation drive for the Eagles 4 Eagles Clothing Closet.

“The Student Government Association Donation Drive Committee is collecting clothes, shoes and accessories for the E4E Clothing Closet. All proceeds will be donated to Eagles 4 Eagles Scholarships for students in financial hardship.”

The SGA has already received quite a few donations of shoes, clothing, and accessories.

“The original donation was for 50 bags of clothes and after we started the committee I think we’ve gotten one bag a week.” said Spencer DeMink, the executive vice president of the SGA.

The SGA handed out all the clothing from the original donation but they will continue to hand out clothing as long as they have clothing to hand out.

That is why DeMink says students can donate clothes “forever.” The clothing drive is continuous.

“We can make do with whatever we’re given but we mostly ask for casual wear,” said DeMink, “If anyone has suits or anything, the office of career and professional development has a drive for professional wear.”

Students can put their donations in either of their two donation boxes found outside the SGA office upstairs in the Student Union or at the bottom of the stairs in the Student Union.

The trouble with his name: Dr.JavierAvilaVisitsArmstrong

What does it mean to be an American of the future? Poet and Professor Dr. Javier Avila will be presenting his one man show “The Trouble with My Name” at Armstrong on Thursday Feb. 6, from 3:00-5:30 p.m. in the ballroom of the Student Union. Avila will be discussing issues regarding language, race and social justice. During the show, Avila will read poetry and relay his life’s story to illustrate what being a future American means. Avila’s message is said to break barriers and embrace the diversity of a nation rich in history and color, as well as move past the boundaries of race, ethnicity and geography.

ARMSTRONG AND SAVANNAH

AND THE RELATIONSHIP BETWEEN THE TWO

BY KEE'ARA SMITH
Section Editor

To enlighten students and faculty on the historical events that took place in Savannah, Georgia Southern invited African Storyteller Karen Wortham to the Armstrong's campus on Jan. 20 in Solms Hall.

Wortham began the lecture with the history of Savannah's relationship with slavery. "Cotton has never been king...there is no product that has costs," said Wortham.

Savannah, Georgia and Charleston, South Carolina, were deep in the breeding of the slave business. White men gathered in groups, began housing and putting their money together to bring back Africans from Africa to America.

After a while the white men started to complain that the shipping was taking too long. The route would take about 3 to 4 months there and the same amount of time back. When the shipping would come, the men would just complain about the condition of the cargo, which were humans. To avoid these problems, the men would make the black males who were brought over to impregnate their own family members to keep inventory growing.

Being African American in Savannah at one point in time was the most important thing in the city. A lot of time our black ancestors didn't even know it. They had no idea how important the Negro was. The market was big and had much to offer. That was until it became a competition. "Have any of you ever heard of Mr. David Ruth Dillion", said Wortham.

white has a white man fall madly in love with her. One of the richest too. Dillion had so much money and power that he was able to get a fake birth certificate for Rachel stating that she was a white woman.

Everything was great they had kids. Most coming out white but the ones who didn't were put in the field. Rachel said nothing. One day one of her sons sees their dad flirting with a younger white woman. They tell their mother Rachel, and she says she will talk to him. The boys decide to handle it on their own and confront their dad, David. The boys burst into their dads office, and a gunshot goes off.

Rachel enters the office and sees one of her sons on the ground dead. Shortly after David leaves Rachel and tries to have her arrested claiming he didn't know she was black. Rachel remembered how she even was labeled white, and fought him in court. Rachel won and got half of his assets. It cost her to never see her white children ever again. This is when women regained their power.

After giving a detailed history of the expansion of the black population here, Wortham went back down memory lane to talk about the "Old South", and how its history is being altered. The Old South had shared it's bad and rotten layers. You can go Downtown and take photographs of the slave storage.

There's a restaurant called "Dubs" on River St. that was a cotton storage building. Later goes on to say it couldn't have been because of how damp the location is. Based off of the agriculture you could never store cotton or hay in a damp location. Worthams main goal with this was to say "Don't make up some mess up and put it here in stone thinking people are supposed to believe it."

"Without Savannah there would be no Armstrong", is how Wortham began the lecture.

Wortham went as far back as 1868 with George Ferguson Armstrong. Armstrong is how the University got its name originally. But the land for the University was set aside by an American historian and politician from Georgia named Thomas Gamble. Gamble later on in life became a Mayor for Savannah. He was even a Democrat.

There was always going to be an "Armstrong", it was set in stone. But during the times where segregation was legal Savannah State thrived. Savannah State is the reason Armstrong is here. Because of Emmanuel King. King came from Marion, Alabama and he had a PhD. He appointed Richard Wright as the first president.

That was the first connection with Africans and Savannah State. State back then was a small college for black children, and black students. Savannah State later on birthed Armstrong Junior College.

Most people who were working along with the ideas from Savannah State. When Armstrong was grounded it was still during a time of segregation.

Ottis Johnson broke color barriers by transferring from State to Armstrong. Once Johnson did that the Universities started working together.

Savannah State and Armstrong are family. "Distant cousins, who you have no choice but to love", says Wortham.

One needs the other. Our campus wasn't built on the land of old plantations but on Indian territory. Although Armstrong wasn't built on history it holds so much. The land this campus sits on is not ours, it is Savannah's.

Talons Food Truck has been a part of the Armstrong Campus for a long time now. It has undergone many name changes and many crew members. A very talented group of Managers who now run the food truck might just be the best yet. The crew Tanesha Cook, Ashleigh Aiello and Santana Gale are very dedicated to ensuring that everyone who visits Talons Food Truck leaves satisfied.

Ashleigh Aiello is the General Manager for Blue Tie Catering, and a Professional Communication and Leadership Major. Santana Gale is an Economics Major, and has been working in the dining department since June 2019. Tanesha Cook, a Biology Major has been working on campus with the food service since 2008.

Running a food truck is no easy task. There's not much space to operate, and dealing with voracious students is near impossible. "I think the path from where we started to where we are now is interesting. We have a better vision, and focus. We have a good direction as to where we want to go," said Aiello.

The Impossible Burger is currently a signature food item at the Talons Food Truck but it doesn't stop there. "Last semester we only had it as a burger, and this semester we've kind of branched out. You can get it in our Southwest Wrap, Taco Grilled Cheese, if you want it in our burrito bowl it's in there too," said Tanesha Cook.

Talons' runs biweekly specials as well. Occasionally those specials become so popular that they are put onto the main menu. "The Maple Bacon Grilled Cheese, it's been pretty popular," said Aiello.

Another signature food item is the Walking Taco. "It's basically a taco in a bag you can get it [with] doritos or fritos and it's a really good on the go food," said Aiello.

Another way the Talons Food Truck is innovating is through the use of sustainable containers and bambooware. That's right the cutlery is made out of bamboo. More specials are being whipped up everyday so make sure to keep an eye on the Talons Food Truck social media pages @GSARMFoodTruck. If you have any comments or suggestions then be sure to make a visit to the food truck and put a suggestion in the suggestion box.

ARMSTRONG CELEBRATES SUPER BOWL SUNDAY

BY REBECCA MUNDAY
The George-Anne Inkwell staff

Super Bowl LIV was a big event on the Armstrong campus. Starting at 1 p.m. on Sunday afternoon, students came to the Student Union Ballroom to register for housing for the 2020-21 academic year. They were also able to get their fill of Super Bowl snacks. Windward Commons hosted a Watch Live SuperBowl Sunday event.

Students that wanted to tour rooms they might want to request were told to do so before they signed in and waited to request a room.

Once students signed in, those who had not already filled out their housing application were directed to two tables with laptops lined up on the wall inside the ballroom so they could complete their application.

After completing their application, they could stand in line for the Super Bowl snacks and drinks that the housing department provided.

At one point the line was nearly to the door. When they got their plate of food, most students sat around with their roommates in the chairs provided and waited for their names to be called.

More chairs had to be brought in to the Student Union to accommodate everyone and even then, many students found themselves eating and chatting with their friends on the floor.

Some students sat outside on the benches and chairs overlooking the first floor of the Student Union and ate their food while they waited for the room selection to start.

While they were eating two students shared their thoughts on who should win the Super Bowl.

“Here’s my pick--the Chiefs,” said Michael Kyser, a Math major.

“I’m going for the 49ers. I believe they have a good defense and it’s gonna be a good game,” said Gerald Lee Jr., a Chemistry major.

Meanwhile, a third student that was with them didn’t care either way.

“If the Falcons aren’t playing, I don’t care,” said Ambriana Jones, a Communication Sciences and Disorders.

At six, the Super Bowl party moved to Windward Commons Cove where RAs hung streamers and set up tables of food. The food included cupcakes, fruit, cheese, chips, meatballs, sodas, and Capri Sun.

Students signed in, got a plate of food, and sat down to talk with their friends.

Before the game, people shared their views on why they wanted to watch the game. Some wanted to watch because it’s tradition.

“I watch it every year,” said Nicolas Williams, a Political Science major.

“I like watching the game, whoever plays,” said Celeste Happeny, a senior in the Nursing program, who wore her Eagles jersey to the game.

Others used the game as an excuse to get out and be social on Sunday evening.

“We’re just here to watch the game. Something to do on a Sunday,” said Briell Hudson, a Public Health major.

“I heard there was going to be a Super Bowl party and I wanted to attend to get out of the dorms and have a social life,” said Shakirah Bean, a sophomore in the Criminal Justice program.

In honor of the NFL’s 100th anniversary, four 100-year-old military veterans, a Tuskegee Airman Colonel Charles McGee, Staff Sgt. Odón Sánchez Cárdenas, Lt. Col. Samuel Lombardo and Cpl. Sidney Walton stood on the field for the coin toss.

The San Francisco 49ers outscored the Chiefs for most of the game. The Chiefs held on and ended up coming back and taking the lead in the fourth quarter. With a final score of 31 to 20, the Kansas City Chiefs won Super Bowl LIV.

UPB BRINGS VIRTUAL REALITY TO ARMSTRONG

STUDENTS STEP INTO THE FUTURE OF VR ON CAMPUS

BY KATIE GRAVES

The George-Anne Inkwell staff

If life is a game, let's play. On Jan. 30, the University Programming Board (UPB) hosted an event for a Virtual Reality Gaming system called HTC Vive in the Student Union. With the help from a headset strapped around the student's head, players are fully immersed in whichever virtual reality they please.

"I'm actually in the University Programming Board [which is] hosting this event...we're trying to get a more diverse crowd this semester, trying to be inclusive... students get to put on the headset and pick which game they want. The Beat Saver seems to be the most popular, where they get to choose the song and go along with the beat. Basketball is also really popular, [gameplay] seemed a lot harder, but people are having a good time," Junior Alexis Eanes, a Psychology major said.

It's a lively crowd, people laughing and ambling between each other in a way that only the Student Union manages to accomplish. What is the VR headset like?

"It's like Dance Dance Revolution...I've tried it before and it was really fun," Freshman Devin Francois said.

Some events to look out for include "A Teddy and A Crush" on Feb. 13 from 12-3 p.m. on the Student Union Porch. Students will have the opportunity to make a stuffed animal that has a UPB or GSU logo on the front, and will also be served "Crush" sodas. Later in the day, "Murder Mystery Valentine's Day edition" will function as an early

RATHER THAN BEING UNHAPPY ABOUT THE PASSING OF THE LEGEND, KOBE, LET US SHED LIGHT ON HIS LEGACY BECAUSE IT WILL FOREVER LIVE ON

KEE'ARA SMITH

Kobe, you left us on Jan. 26 alongside with your beautiful daughter Gigi and seven other passengers. Bryant is a five-time NBA champion, two-time NBA finals MVP, 18 time NBA All-Star, he's also a husband, brother, hardworking man, and most importantly a father. He is an inspiration to millions of people around the world including myself, because of the consistency of his craft and his love for all people.

Something he once said that stuck with me was: "The lesson I cherish the most is how important it is to love what you do, if you love what you do and it's making you happy all the hard work and perseverance will payoff... you can't stop people from trying to limit your dreams, but you can stop it from becoming a reality. I encourage you to always be curious, always seek out things you love, and always work hard when you find it...please know that I am always thinking of you"-Kobe Bryant.

Kobe Bryant also known as Black Mamba has encouraged millions to push harder; even when you're feeling weak. The Mamba mentality that he created for all of us to see was the drive, passion and commitment that we should have and thrive on. Pushing yourself even when you feel like you have accomplished something. You will always have room to improve anything that you seek to assist as long as you have the passion for it.

The Mamba Mentality is a way of life, and I as well as millions will forever treasure it.

Shortly after his death ESPN's anchor Elle Duncan shared her story from meeting Kobe. "...I asked him if he would have more children in the future. "I would have five more girls if I could," Bryant told me. "I'm a girl dad." Says Duncan.

Duncan's story quickly caused a trend. Dads around the world shared photos with their children, mostly daughters using the hashtag "Girl dad". Not only were fans and citizens taking part of this but celebrities as well. Even in this passing time he is still creating legacies.

The biggest thing that we all can take from this is that it's not just about basketball. It is about being the best in anything that you do, and giving it your all. Going beyond what someone sees you as

In this trying time, reach out to a love one. Love the ones that are dear to you. Mend the past and focus on the future.

You never know when it's your time. So accomplish as much as possible so your legacy can live on too. Kobe is someone who will be truly missed and will live on forever in our hearts.

FANS PAY TRIBUTE TO NBA LEGEND

Fans gather around Kobe Bryant tribute to mourn late-Lakers legend

BY GABRIEL WILLIAMS
The George-Anne Inkwell contributor

Last week, the world paid tribute to honor the nine victims killed in the tragic helicopter crash on January 26th including the retired 41-year-old NBA legend, Kobe Bryant. Thousands of fans, celebrities, and individuals across the world mourned the death of one of the greatest basketball players of all time.

According to authorities, pilot Ara Zobayan tried to fly above foggy conditions due to low visibility early Sunday morning. Shortly afterwards, the helicopter crashed into a hillside in Calabasas, California. It was also confirmed that all members aboard died including the pilot.

The passengers were en route to play at a basketball game scheduled later that morning. The helicopter consisted of coaches, parents, and kids. Also, among the nine people was one of Bryant’s daughters, Gianna Bryant.

Grammy-Award winning artist, Alicia Keys, opened this year’s Grammys with a special tribute honoring the retired Los Angeles basketball player in the Staples Center.

“We’re all feeling crazy sadness right now,” said Keys.

“We’re literally standing here heartbroken in the house that Kobe Bryant built,” Keys also said.

Talks show hosts including Wendy Williams, Jimmy Fallon, and Ellen DeGeneres all gave emotional tributes to him during their shows. Fans left jerseys, flowers, posters, and other tributes outside the Staples Center to honor his legacy. Last Friday night was an emotional night for the Lakers as they played against the Sacramento Kings.

Even though Sacramento won the game, both teams walked away knowing that they won in honor of Bryant. During the pregame tribute, LeBron James gave an emotional speech highlighting the impact Bryant had on the Lakers nation.

“FOR ME IT WAS TRYING TO PLAY AS HARD AS I CAN JUST KNOWING THAT’S WHAT HE WOULD WANT ME TO DO.”

ANTHONY DAVIS
Los Angeles Lakers

“This is a celebration of the 20 years of the blood, the sweat, the tears, the broken-down body, the getting up, the sitting down, the everything, the countless hours, the determination to be as great as he could be. Tonight, we celebrate the kid who came here at 18 years of age, retired at 38 and became probably the best dad we’ve seen over the last three years,” said James.

In the post-game ESPN interview, James and Anthony Davis discussed what the NBA legend meant to them and the Lakers organization.

“For me it was trying to play as hard as I can just knowing that’s what he would want me to do,” said Davis.

After retiring to a 20-year season in 2016, Bryant began to spend more time with family and give back to the community. The two-time Olympic Gold medalist won an Oscar for his short-animated film, “Dear Basketball” back in 2018. The film discusses his childhood experiences with basketball and highlights his love for the sport.

Charities he supported included Make A Wish Foundation, Stand Up to Cancer, and After School All-Stars. More notably, Bryant and his wife started the Kobe and Vanessa Bryant Family Foundation with hopes to improve the lives of young people and their families. The foundation provides scholarships to young athletes and operates “Mamba FC”, a youth soccer club that teaches participants how to become leaders and independent thinkers through sports.

In the midst of all the pain and tears from fans, many still question the character of the five-time NBA champion. According to a New York Times report, Bryant was charged with sexually assaulting a 19-year old woman in a hotel in 2003. Prosecutors were forced to drop the case because of the accuser’s unwillingness to testify in court.

The lawsuit ended in an undisclosed settlement between the two. However, some people felt that his overall success after the accusations covered his mistakes and made him a better person.

“We all make mistakes as human beings, and I feel that Kobe made a lot of progress into building back his great reputation not only as a player and a dad, but as a person,” said Justin Smith a Biology major.

Smith grew up watching Bryant on TV and considers him as a very important role model. According to a story conducted by the Washington Post, Bryant named himself the “Black Mamba” to get through the toughest times of his basketball career. His success inspired his daughter, Gianna to play basketball.

Many believe she would have grown to become the greatest player in women’s basketball. In an earlier encounter with Bryant, ESPN commenter Ellen Duncan asked him for his advice on raising daughters.

“Just be grateful that you’ve been given that gift because girls are amazing,” replied Bryant.

“When I reflect on this tragedy, and that half hour I spent with Kobe Bryant two years ago, I suppose that the only small source of comfort for me is knowing he died doing what he loved the most: being a dad. Being a girl’s dad,” Duncan said on “SportsCenter,” a televised sports news program.

In fact, on social media platforms like Twitter and Instagram, the hashtag #GirlDad went viral as fathers across the world shared photos and moments of themselves with their daughters. Bryant is survived by his Wife, Vanessa and their three remaining daughters. It was announced earlier this week that funeral arrangements would be made sometime soon.

“It’s sad we lost him so early in the year, and moving forward, watching basketball games will be hard to watch without him,” said Natasha Binks, an English major.

The culminating message to take from this is to hold families and friends and tell them you love them. Retired Professional basketball players including Shaq were also devastated and heartbroken to hear the sad news.

“I haven’t felt a pain that sharp in a while,” said Shaq in an ESPN interview.

“I lost a little brother,” he also said.

Life really is short and it’s important to enjoy life to the fullest every day because tomorrow isn’t promised. Do everything now instead of later. Bryant will always be remembered as the one of the greatest NBA players of all times. R.I.P. Kobe, Gianna, and all the others whose lives were lost.
